About the Event

As supporting people with mental health issues in the criminal justice system becomes more prominent in the Government’s agenda, our Improving Mental Health Services in the Criminal Justice System Conference ensures you are able to comply with new duties, enhance partnership working and improving services for the most vulnerable in our society.

Following the introduction of the Police and Crime Bill which is set to provide a safe and effective intervention for people experiencing a mental health crisis, take away transferable learning from the Home Office on duties arising from the new legislation and receive an update on the Crisis Care Conundrum from the National Police Chief’s Council (NPCC).

Key topics include:
• Utilising liaison and diversion to reduce the number of people who receive a custodial sentence and identify vulnerabilities earlier
• Moving towards a more cost-effective telephone triage model
• Ensuring the court process is suitable when prosecuting those with complex needs
• Assess innovative ways of providing housing and training to prevent re-offending

Do not miss this excellent networking opportunity to make certain you are able to face the evolving landscape of mental health in the criminal justice system.

Benefits of Attending

• Put your questions to the Home Office on the future of policing and mental health
• Understand how health services and police can work together to cope with the widening of Section 136
